Having a bunch of options can be a perk, but it can also be a hassle. You may have the best idea of how to spend your weekend, but it gets a bit more complicated when you have a bunch of apps open and a few windows on your screen. Besides looking at the clock and doing nothing, you could open a few of the most important apps right now to see if something is missing or just to check if there are any errors before they slow down your PC. JCleaner allows you to move through those apps and windows with ease, especially when you are on the move. Some are placed on the bottom bar (like the taskbar) where they can be moved around, while others are floating to the top. You can resize them, close them, or remove them if you so desire. Customization JCleaner is more than just an app that you run, it is also a fully customizable application. You can change the colors of the interface as well as resize the dialogs. You may also select any of the tools available within the app so that you can see them in a different way. Simply use the various tabs on the window to make modifications. App placement JCleaner allows you to place apps and windows on the taskbar, using the options available in the Settings panel. You can create your own layout which suits your work, and there are also predefined layouts for various apps and windows. For example, you can set a specific layout for the Microsoft Edge browser. Finishing the job Closing unwanted apps is essential, but you also need to be careful not to remove something important. With JCleaner you get the possibility to close apps with a single click. The app also has a Clean Up option, which gets rid of all the junk that you don't need on your computer. The process may get a little more complex, but it should not stop you from cleaning at all. File monitoring JCleaner uses a scheduler so that you don't have to do the basic tasks that a cleaner must perform on the frequent basis. You can also make it so that JCleaner remains active when you are using your computer. Getting started JCleaner can be used on both 32-bit and 64-bit editions of Windows 7, Windows 8, and Windows 10. There are also additional editions available. The latest version is 1.6. It is available for free from the developer's website.

Multichannel Fourier spectroscopy is an effective tool for measuring relative differences between two optical spectra. We have combined a CO (v = 2-1) laser with an optical interferometer to generate a COS spectrum for the 3-6 THz frequency range. The interferometer is based on a moving diffraction grating pair and a photodetector array; it has been tested in the frequency range 3-8 THz. The calibration of the interferometer was performed with an argon-ion laser, and by comparing the reference spectrum with that from a temperature-stabilized quartz cell filled with CO at room temperature. The accuracy is estimated to be about 5% (2 sigma). Experiments in the 3-6 THz range have been performed with a supersonic CO beam.John, I think you are correct.
